

University of Brescia

Vice-Chancellor

Brescia, August 6th 2014

Dear Colleague,

the University of Brescia has recently approved a strategic plan for the years 2014-2016 named Health&Wealth, that includes a new course for generating innovative skills and competence dedicated to health and wealth of people in the environment. The vision and the mission of this strategic plan have already been recognized by the Italian Ministry of Health, who has signed a specific agreement that makes Brescia a hub for testing new models of care and management for health and wealth.

The first important effect of this thematic vocation is represented by two advanced training courses, a Master of Science in “Science and Technology for population Health and Wealth” and a PhD program in “Technology for Health”, both in English. To encourage an international participation, a call for 5 fellowships dedicated to the Master of Science and 2 fellowships for the PhD program is now available for foreign students.

More information is on our website www.unibs.it and <http://healthandwealth.unibs.it>. With the hope that you can make this information available to clever and curious students, I send you my best personal regards.

Sincerely,

Prof. Maurizio Memo
Vice-Chancellor for the coordination of research activities, internationalization and higher education
